

MOUSE WITH INTEGRATED KEYPLATE AND HOUSING

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[27] An input device, such as a mouse or trackball, with a top housing having an integrally formed, free extending top button. The top housing is mounted so that the extending button is supported in cantilevered fashion. The button is sufficiently flexible to allow it to be depressed for button activation.

PA 3169293 v1

09623C-036300US